

be beaten as little as possible and when "Atlantics" went in for their fifth the bats set to work in earnest, and, thanks to Pascoe they were completely routed after making only one run. The Ingersoll boys then took the bat for their fifth, and took their opponents the spectators, and themselves by surprise making the unusual score of 18, which put them two ahead. They now began to have some hopes of winning the game, but the sixth told bad against them, and, at the close they were again behind; but they made good for this in the seventh by making 10 runs themselves and "whitewashing" the "Atlantics." It was now plain that the Woodstock boys were satisfied that they had only played to lose, and when both nines had put in the eighth, and Ingersoll 22 ahead, they knew they were all up with them. The "Atlantics" went in for the ninth and scored nothing, and as Ingersoll was 22 in advance, without the ninth the game was closed, the champions being once more declared victorious. The following is the score:
